

Dear Parishioners,

As we print the newsletter Pope Benedict is arriving. The following comment reminds us of what a potent symbol the person of the Pope is.

“John Paul II was brilliant in so many ways: teaching, preaching, strengthening us. But he knew that actions speak louder than words. He came to Britain even though there was a war on. He went to Jerusalem and stood in visible prayer at the Western Wall to begin the healing of the long rift between the people of the old and new covenants.

And in his last days and hours, he demonstrated the absolute value of human life, determined not to waste a minute of his allotted span. He knew how inconvenient the elderly are and how impatient western society is of their infirmities.

His actions simply said: I am as much me in my trembling infirmity as I was in my vigorous strength. I speak as eloquently in my frustrated silence as I did in my dramatic oratory. Was it not ordained that the Christ should suffer? The value of suffering is not to be gainsaid”.

Back to Benedict and in response to “Are the British people going to be surprised by the Pope?” The British Ambassador to the Holy See commented: “I think the surprise will be that they will see the Pope for themselves; they will hear him for themselves, unfiltered. Some of the things that are alleged the Pope has said -- he hasn't said. There are some myths about what the Pope teaches, that he attacked our equality legislation as it was going through parliament. He didn't. He made reference in his address to the English bishops about his regret at certain things that had happened -- in the past tense. He was responding to points the bishops had made to him. He was not referring to the passage of current legislation. He didn't interfere in the parliamentary process. Equally, some people have manipulated some of his speeches in the past, to say that he referred to X, Y and Z, when he didn't. I think people will find a warm, intelligent figure who is coming on a historic visit that has many examples of rapprochement. For me personally, the most poignant moment will be at 5pm on Friday when he speaks in Westminster Hall, on the very spot where Thomas More was condemned to death. That shows you how far we have come as a country, because I don't think that would have been possible 28 years ago.”

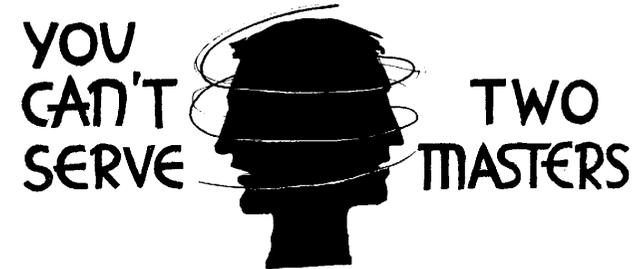

Finally after much negotiation the cost of the work on the Hall has been reduced from £109,000 to £79,000 and work begins on Monday.
